

Weston has been leading the way in environmental, health and safety (EHS) solutions for over 65 years. We make compliance simple and help boost operational performance with practical, scalable strategies.

YOUR ROADMAP TO REGULATORY COMPLIANCE

Our nationwide team of environmental engineers, occupational health specialists, safety professionals, and digital solutions experts listens first, then delivers scalable programs that fit your operational needs. From tracking regulatory updates and OSHA requirements to strengthening documentation, safety policies, and management systems, we provide cost effective EHS solutions and permitting strategies that mitigate risks, protect employees, and enhance performance.

We handle the heavy lifting so you can focus on business operations while sustaining a healthy workplace and positive safety culture. Every plan we build, every workplace we assess, and every design we shape is a shared step toward stronger, digitally enabled EHS programs. By integrating EHS into your processes, we help transform complex requirements into responsible and resilient practices.

EHS Outsourcing
Scalable Support Across All Areas

Environmental Compliance and IH Services for Major Transportation Authority.

Since 1988, Weston has supported a New York-based transportation agency under six successive on-call environmental services contracts. Services include environmental testing, IAQ assessments, hazardous building material surveys, and regulatory permitting support. Weston performs lead and asbestos inspections, abatement monitoring, contaminated soil oversight, and potable water sampling across airports, tunnels, bridges, marine terminals, and transit facilities. Our team also responds to hazard complaints and provides staff augmentation for compliance support. Through daily task execution and seamless integration with client teams, Weston has helped maintain safe, compliant operations across one of the nation's most complex infrastructure networks.

On-Call Industrial Hygiene Services for a Major NYC Utility Provider. Since 1993, Weston has supported a New York City-based utility organization under an on-call environmental services contract. Weston has completed over 75 IH assignments since 2002, including personal and area air sampling, noise dosimetry, IAQ and mold assessments, and testing for asbestos, lead-based paint, and heavy metals. Projects have included confined space gas detection, asbestos-negative exposure monitoring, and VOC and particulate sampling in office, lab, and industrial settings. Weston's work helps clients maintain regulatory compliance, protect worker health, and implement effective hearing conservation and hazard mitigation programs across a wide range of facilities.

Onsite Outsourcing to Enhance EHS Teams. Weston embeds dedicated EHS professionals directly within a client's operations to deliver continuous, hands-on support across all aspects of compliance, risk management, and workplace safety. By seamlessly integrating into daily workflows, the onsite EHS team gains an understanding of the organization's processes, culture and operational challenges enabling us to design, implement and improve programs that are both practical and aligned with business objectives.

Whether supporting the safe launch of new products, protecting the medical community, helping scientists stay healthy while researching the next breakthrough, or improving workplace culture for teams building the next generation data center, Weston's onsite presence ensures that EHS performance directly supports and accelerates the client's mission. Our clients say, "Weston serves as a true strategic partner, designing and implementing critical EHS programs that enable rapid issue response, real-time employee coaching, and seamless alignment with each client's operational priorities."
